Fire Destroys Two Buildings At Springhill Lake Apartments

by Mary Lou Williamson

At about 2 p.m. Friday, December 21 firefighters and paramedics from Greenbelt, Berwyn Heights, Branchville and surrounding fire companies were called to a building fire at Springhill Lake (SHL) Apartments. Units arriving at 9336 Edmonston Road encountered a three-story garden-style apartment building with heavy smoke and fire showing from the rear of the building. Firefighters stretched hoselines and initiated an aggressive interior attack on the fire and a simultaneous search and rescue for possible trapped occupants, according to Mark E. Brady, Prince George's County Fire Department spokesperson.

Greenbelt's fire department responded with a mixed volunteer and career crew, made interior attacks on the fire and supplied water to the tower truck from Company 7 and Engine 112. Greenbelt's chief was part of the command unit operating on the scene. The units from Greenbelt were on the scene for over four hours, assisting both with the initial attack on the fire and with overhaul once the fire was extinguished.

The fire appears to have started in a ground-floor apartment, according to Brady, and extended rapidly through the upper floors and eventually through the roof. Second and third alarms were sounded, dispatching 75 firefighters and paramedics to the scene. It required 45 minutes to knock the bulk of the fire down, Brady said. No injuries to civilians or firefighters have been reported.

An adjoining building at 9338 Edmonston Road sustained significant fire damage as well. Sixty residents were evacuated from the 21 apartments in the two buildings. A third building was also affected as water and heat were lost when SHL maintenance crews shut off utilities to the two fire-damaged buildings.

Charles Cummings, who lives next door, told the News Review he was coming home from the Metro station, walking. He spoke of the "confusion" he felt as he tried to take in what was happening and get to his apartment. He stood and looked for a while. "It was heart-breaking to watch" as peoples' homes were burning, Cummings said.

By Sunday, the broken windows and doorways were boarded up and huge blue tarps covered the burned out section of the roof. Rented chain link fencing closed off the destroyed buildings.

"No one," Cummings said (meaning the residents), "has been able to get back into the buildings."

Investigation

The cause of the fire is under investigation, Brady said. The focus is on one of the apartments on the ground floor but entering that area is not yet possible, he

Compact Fluorescent Lightbulbs Are a Green Savings Alternative

by Tom Jones

The following is the latest in a series of occasional environmental articles from the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. Sustainable Design and Practice (SDP) Committee. Tom Jones, a volunteer for the SDP Committee, recently researched use of compact fluorescent light bulbs at Rapidan Camps in Virginia.

You've probably heard about compact fluorescent (CF) light bulbs, which can be used to replace ordinary old-fashioned incandescent light bulbs. Many Greenbelters already have CF bulbs installed in their houses. The electricity savings can be significant – CF bulbs use about 1/3 the electricity of traditional incandescent bulbs. This means $5 per year savings in electricity for each bulb that is used three hours a day.

In summer savings from CF bulbs are compounded. A CF bulb also produces 1/3 as much heat, so a running air conditioner doesn't have to cool as much; in fact, more power may be saved from the air conditioner than from the light itself. In winter, however, homes with electric resistance heat (like most in GHI) see very little energy savings from CF bulbs. While light bulbs are not usually used for their heat, they actually are almost as efficient at heating a home as a baseboard heater (but not gas, oil and heat pumps).

CF bulbs are more complex than incandescent light bulbs so it helps to learn some details. Read on.

CF Quality

The Energy Star rating certifies CF bulbs for many important criteria including lifespan, startup time, light color and for not flickering. Discount bulbs may produce a much harsher light that can make colors look different. Energy Star bulbs must also state on the package the minimum temperature at which they should be used, which is important since some discount bulbs do not work at all outside in cold weather. Energy Star bulbs usually reach their full brightness in about 30 seconds; discount bulbs can take as long as three minutes.

Some people feel that CF bulbs are dimmer than incandescent bulbs. Most manufacturers provide a "wattage equivalent" rating, for instance saying a 15 watt CF bulb takes the place of a 60 watt incandescent bulb. However, there are no formal standards for this comparison. A 75-watt equivalent CF bulb replacing a 60-watt incandescent bulb will still result in significant electricity savings, so use

Masks, Mystery and Music Will Entertain One and All

by Anne Gardner

It's going to be carnival time, Venetian style, at this year's Greenbelt New Year celebration. The revels will begin on Monday at 6:15 p.m. in the skate park (in the absence of canals and bridges in Greenbelt) with a traditional sword-fighting "battle of the bridges" and at 6:45 p.m. the crowning of the mysterious masked King Paolo and Queen Francesca. They will reign over the festivities for the remainder of the evening. Be sure to bow to them. If they wave their scepters at one, that means good luck in the new year.

Also at the skate park one can enjoy hot cider, s'mores and a sing-a-long, courtesy of the Greenbelt Girl Scouts and local folk singer Melissa Sites, before moving inside to the other New Year's venues.

In the Community Center fun activities are promised for all ages. Continuing the Venetian theme, party goers can make a Carnevale mask and other accessories then, suitably disguised, venture forth to enjoy the many musicians and other activities. There will be juggling, balancing and tight-rope walking by circus performer Gregory May, Mad Hot Ballroom dancing with Frank

Want to listen to some music? Then relax in the piano lounge with Greenbelters Jim Olson and Chris Fominaya playing American standards, Broadway, jazz and contemporary pop standards. Join my husband and me ("Transatlantic Crossing") for traditional fiddle tunes from both sides of the Atlantic and sample some traditional Chinese and Scottish folk music with "East and West," another local Greenbelt band.

For something a little different, try "Thus," performing "an astounding array of strange music" on instruments they invented themselves. Meanwhile, on the main stage in the gym, all can hear the high-energy Duke Ellington School of the Arts choir and dance to DC Motors.

Hungry? The Scholarship Café will be selling hot dogs, sesame noodles, chicken-on-a-stick and other goodies in aid of the Mary Purcell Geiger Scholarship Fund and Chef Lou will be dishing up his legendary desserts in the piano lounge.

Some 17-year-olds May Now Vote in Primary Election

by Judy Bell

On December 20 the Maryland State Board of Elections made a unanimous decision to allow most 17-year-olds to vote in primary elections. According to a press release by the board, Attorney General Douglas Gansler had previously advised that 17-year-olds could not vote in primary elections.

Gansler has subsequently reversed his opinion, now allowing the implementation of Maryland law as it has been in the past and asserting that the associated rights of the political parties, as guaranteed by the First Amendment, allows the parties to determine whether a 17-year-old who will be 18 by the next general election may vote in the party's primary. Both the Maryland Democratic and Republican Parties have explicitly stated that a 17-year-old registered with the party may vote in that party's primary election.

All 17-year-olds who have previously submitted voter registration applications are now active registered voters who are eligible to vote in the primary election of the party with which they are affiliated.

The Maryland State Board of Elections has requested that the State Superintendent of Schools Nancy Grasmick provide assistance with ensuring that 17-year-olds in state schools are aware that they can register and vote in the upcoming 2008 Presidential Primary on February 12 if they will be 18 on or before the general election.

The deadline to register to vote in this election is Tuesday, January 22, 2008. Voter registration applications are available at www.election.state.md.us. The toll-free number for the board is 800-222-8683.

City Police Spread Christmas Cheer

by Alexandra Lopez

Christmas came early to Springhill Lake Elementary children this December in the form of friendly law enforcement officers from the Greenbelt Police Department.

The children, selected based on individual necessity by administrators at Springhill Lake Elementary School, met early Saturday morning with members of the Greenbelt Police Department for the first annual “Shop with a Cop” program.

The primary purpose of the “Shop with a Cop” program is to provide a happier holiday season for 20 lucky children, each given $100 dollars to spend at their discretion on themselves and their loved ones at the local Target Department Store at Beltway Plaza. The funding to make this event possible came from generous donations from the Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police – Lodge #32, Target at Beltway Plaza, Springhill Lake Apartments and the Greenbelt community at large, to whom the children participating are clearly very grateful.

After being transported by bus from the Springhill Lake Recreation Center to Target for Christmas shopping, they returned to the recreation center to wrap their presents and eat a pizza lunch, courtesy of Three Brother’s Pizza.

In addition, the families of each participant were given a $50 gift certificate to Safeway to help with Christmas dinner, provided by donations from the Faith Baptist Church of Laurel.

Foundation Funds Libraries’ Access

Public libraries throughout Maryland will receive funds to update their publicly accessible computer hardware. The Maryland State Department of Education’s Division of Library Development and Services has announced that the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation is awarding more than $400,000 in grants to help Maryland public libraries provide quality access to computers and the internet.

The new “Opportunity Online” Hardware Grants are for public libraries serving communities with high concentrations of poverty and at risk of having outdated technology. The grants are designed to help secure sustained local funding for computer replacements and upgrades to maintain quality technology services. Forty-nine public libraries in Maryland are eligible to participate in the grant which requires that libraries secure a local match. Librarians participating in the program will also be required to go through training designed to help them raise awareness in their community about their library’s services and increase local support and funding for technology services.

Early in 2007, Maryland public libraries received over $34,000 from the Gates Foundation to fund two outreach projects: the Rural Library Sustainability Project to enhance networking in rural libraries and keep their libraries thriving and the Spanish Language Outreach Project to provide library staff with skills to reach out to the Spanish language community.

Board of Ed. Elects Chair, Recounts Successes

On day 365 of its first term as an elected body, the Prince George’s County Board of Education elected Verjeana M. Jacobs, Esq. as its chair and Ron L. Watson, Ph.D. as vice chair. They will serve in their positions for one calendar year.

Jacobs, a Bladensburg High School graduate, served as vice chair her first year in office and is also the chair of the Board’s Finance Subcommittee.

In addition to becoming vice-chair, Watson continues to serve as co-chair of the Capital Improvement Program Subcommittee. Watson, a graduate of Central High School, was recently appointed to the county’s Career and Technical Education Task Force and noted that this initiative is one of great importance to him and the school system because these programs and experiences will help prepare youth for post-secondary and lifelong education, vocational and technical training, and expanded career options.

In assuming the new position, Jacobs cited three major accomplishments during the Board’s first year.

Grant Funding

Prince George’s County Public Schools (PGCPS) is one of 18 school districts in the nation to receive over 1.5 million from the Federal Teacher Incentive Fund grant which offers incentives to keep the best and brightest teachers in its classrooms serving children who need them most. Pilot schools have not yet been selected.

Advance Placement

Final results released by the College Board show dramatic increases in the number of Prince George’s County public school students excelling in college-level courses and demonstrating mastery on Advanced Placement (AP) exams. Participation among African-American children, who represent more than three quarters of the county’s students, grew 42.5 percent. The number of exams taken by African-American students increased by 46.1 percent and the number of exam scores of 3, 4 and 5 turned in by African-American students rose 36.3 percent. Many universities will reward a score of 3 or higher with college credit. Additionally, the number of test takers among Hispanic students increased 57.3 percent with 42.7 percent scoring 3 or better.

Overall in PGCPS, 3,271 students took an AP exam in 2007, an increase of 30.2 percent from 2006, and scored an overall increase of 17.3 percent in the number of AP exam scores of three or higher.

School Improvement

As state assessments scores continued to rise, PGCPS experienced record levels of student achievement and many schools exiting School Improvement status. Eleven elementary schools came out of School Improvement and 17 elementary and middle schools in improvement made Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) and are now in position to exit improvement status next year.

Seven high schools exited School Improvement and six more made AYP so are in position to exit next year. Also, no new high schools entered School Improvement status.

How to Create A Green Home

Choose Energy Star appliances. Energy Star-qualified products meet a high level of energy efficiency, which can translate into savings in electric bills. When considering the price of a new appliance, consider not only the purchase price but also the long-term savings. A reduction in a household energy bill by $50 per appliance per year or more.

Reel and a Meal Attracting Audience to New Deal Café

by Brian St. George

As the New Deal Café struggles for financial survival, it continues not only to bring music and art to Greenbelt but also a film and dinner series. Reel and a Meal has been powering along for four months, attracting motivated and energetic crowds of 40 to 60 people to see films with an environmental theme and to enjoy the vegetarian creations of Chef Debra.

Reel and a Meal is a collaboration between the Beaverdam Creek Watershed Watch group, Chesapeake Climate Action Network, Prince George's Peace and Justice Coalition, Global Consciousness Press, CHEARS and, of course, the New Deal Café. It was established to foster understanding in the community and beyond on how the ecology of the planet affects us all. (Rumor has it, it may even have attracted a mole from the NSA.)

The latest film in the series, "Homeland," depicts four different American Indian tribes struggling for basic human rights under attack from the powerful and rich: Coal, Oil, Nuclear and Gas corporations, often referred to as King CONG. Where does a 300 lb. gorilla do its business?

The real issue at stake with Indian territories is land rights – they don't have any. So CONG companies can and often do set up operations that poison aquifers, rivers and land that Native Americans and non-Native Americans depend on for survival. A legal maneuver referred to as sacrificial land allows CONG to go after any land it wants, provided it can convince the federal government its actions are vital to the national interest.

As reservations are often remote, without media outlets or proper legal representation, CONG often gets its way. (Setting up a uranium mine in Bethesda would be a bit more challenging.)

In the first story the Cheyenne refused to sell their soul to buy their future. So the federal government provided leases on the edge of Cheyenne territory, allowing CONG to use a Cheyenne river as a sewer without consulting the tribe.

All films showing at the New Deal are independent and focus on issues that affect our lives, as opposed to commercial films about teenagers on spring break or Bruce Willis saving us from evildoers. You're not likely to see these films at Beltway Plaza nor at Blockbuster. Perhaps that's a good reason to come to the New Deal. That – and if you're lucky, you may get some of Shirley Middleton's holiday fudge.

Active Audience

The audience of mostly Greenbelters were engaged and asking questions on issues. The New Deal continues to be staffed by nearly all volunteers – a Greenbelt tradition – serving, preparing and taking orders. They could use more such volunteers. This type of event benefits the New Deal and keeps it as a community resource. Who else will provide this type of service should the New Deal not be here?

Perhaps this has always been the case in history. If the New Deal were selling Big Macs and featuring Britney Spears, human rights and environmental justice would probably not be on the menu. The films are scheduled on the third Monday of every month, with the next showing on January 21. Check the New Deal website at www.newdealcafe.com for details.

Breast Cancer Drive Raises $1.2 Million

Safeway has announced that $1.2 million was raised through customer and employee contributions during the company's annual Breast Cancer Awareness Campaign in October, the grocery chain's most successful fundraising program of any kind. Nationally Safeway raised a total of $16.7 million during the month-long drive that supports breast cancer research projects, organizations and educational programs in communities where Safeway operates stores.

During October customers were given an opportunity to donate to the cause at check-out by placing change in canisters, purchasing fundraising candy bars or supporting a variety of fundraising activities. Many stores also held raffles, sold hot dogs, beverages and other food items to raise money and awareness. This year's effort was also supported by approximately 40 elected officials from the mid-Atlantic region who agreed to serve as guest baggers in local stores with customer donations being contributed to the cause.

The beneficiaries for the Washington and Baltimore areas are MedStar Health, with a network of seven facilities in the area, and the Kimmel Cancer Center at Johns Hopkins University. Both organizations will share the proceeds raised by Safeway's Eastern Division which includes Delaware, Washington, D.C., Maryland and Virginia.

CASA volunteers present their recommendations about the children's needs to the court.

CASA/Prince George's County is now accepting applications for day and evening training sessions. Bilingual volunteers are especially needed and urged to apply.

GIVE THANKS

Every breath that we breathe is a blessing from God and we learn from the Prophet Solomon (peace be upon him) to recognize these blessings each day. The Holy Qur'an tells us how he never forgot to be thankful to God. He is quoted to have said, "This is by the grace of my Lord, to test me whether I am grateful or ungrateful! And if any is grateful, it is (a gain) for his own soul; but if any is ungrateful, truly my Lord is free of all needs, supreme in honor."
— The Holy Qur'an, 27:40

Count your blessings every day. For more information about gratefulness from an Islamic perspective, call 301-982-9463 or email info@searchislam.org or visit www.searchislam.org.

Md. Retail Rules Explained by AG

The Maryland Attorney General’s Consumer Protection Division offers the following information about shopping and holiday gifts.

Gift Cards

Many gift cards have an expiration date or fees after initial use. Since 2006 Maryland law says store-specific cards may not expire fewer than four years after purchase and the store may not impose fees or charges of any kind during that four year period. Any terms or conditions about expiration or fees after four years must be printed clearly in a visible place on the card or its envelope.

Returns, Exchanges

Despite the best intentions, refunds and exchanges of gifts are common during the holiday season. A retailer is allowed to set whatever policy it chooses for returns or exchanges, as long as it posts the policy. Before making a purchase, find out the store’s return policy. The refund rule says that if a store imposes limitations on refunds or returns, the merchant must disclose its policy in writing so consumers are aware of the policy before making their purchases. Also ask for a gift receipt at the time of purchase to enclose with any gifts. If the store does not offer gift receipts, keep the receipt to support any refund request.

Defective Items

Some of the best presents can be well-received but defective. Purchases are covered by an implied warranty – a guarantee that the item works when purchased – regardless of the store’s return policy. Implied warranties require that goods be in operating condition and fit for sale and that they continue to work for a reasonable period of time. Merchants must honor the implied warranty whenever they sell a new or used product, other than used cars.

For more information call the Consumer Protection Division’s hotline at 410-528-8662 or visit the website at www.oag.state.md.us.

the next larger size if more light is needed.

Some people notice the difference between regular and “soft light,” so you may want to consider this factor in CF bulbs. The color of a CF light is often rated in Kelvins. Lower Kelvin ratings have more red light and are more suitable for bedrooms and living rooms. Higher Kelvin ratings have more blue light and are more suitable for kitchens and workplaces.

Standard CF bulbs are not made to work with a dimmer and use of a dimmer can even pose a fire hazard. If a dimmer is needed purchase specified dimmer-compatible CF bulbs, which cost more and are becoming more commonly available. These work well for brighter intensities but if the dimmer is set for low light, the bulb will create a flashing strobe effect.

CF bulbs are available at many stores, although experience suggests being particularly wary of generic bulbs from big box stores. One Greenbelter recommends the website 1000bulbs.com.

Using CF Bulbs

The lifespan of a CF bulb is significantly impacted by how often it is turned on and off. A report from the National Lighting Product Information Program says “[CF bulbs] are not recommended in spaces where lights are switched on and off frequently, such as bathrooms and closets. [CF] products are recommended for spaces such as living rooms, dining rooms, bedrooms, hotel rooms and outdoors where they are likely to be started less frequently.” Other, more minor factors affecting the lifetime of a CF bulb are whether it is used in an enclosed or an open fixture and even whether it is used with the screw base facing up or down. See the National Lighting Product Information Program (NLPiP) information at the end of the article.

Remember that many CF bulbs are bigger than incandescent bulbs, so check the size of the bulb to confirm it will fit into the fixture.

Disposal

On disposal, CF bulbs contain small amounts of mercury and should not be thrown into the trash. They should be given to a special CF bulb recycling program. Both Ikea and My Organic Market in College Park have collection centers. For information about disposing of CF bulbs and for cleaning up if one accidentally breaks, see the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) website listed below.

As mentioned in the “Be Cool, Save Money, Help the Planet” series published last year in the Greenbelt News Review, the mercury content of CF bulbs is not a reason to avoid using them. The largest source of mercury in our air comes from burning fossil fuels to produce electricity. According to EPA that means that use and disposal of CF bulbs has less negative environmental impact than the incandescent bulb – and the impact is even lower if the CF bulb is recycled.

For most typical household uses of light bulbs, switching to CF bulbs is a great way to save both energy and money and also to help reduce pollution. But it is important to get the right CF bulb and to use it in the right place.

More Information

The September 2007 issue of Consumer Reports has a detailed review of CF bulbs including ratings and is available at the Greenbelt Library. The NLPiP has very detailed reports for free download at www.lrc.rpi.edu/NLPiP. The EPA “Fact Sheet: Mercury in Compact Fluorescent Lamps (CFLs)” is available at www.energystar.gov/ia/products/lighting/buyers_guide/Mercury.pdf.

CSPM Enrollment Period Is Now Open

The College Savings Plans of Maryland (CSPM), a state agency, announced that the 2007-2008 enrollment period for participation in the Maryland Prepaid College Trust (MPCT) is now open and will continue so through April 4, 2008.

The MPCT is one of the two Section 529 plans offered by the CSPM that give families a tax-advantaged way to save for college education. Both plans are backed by the security of a Maryland Legislative Guarantee.

The other vehicle for college savings is the Maryland College Investment Plan (MCIP), which is open for enrollment year-round and is managed and distributed by T. Rowe Price. The MCIP was recognized this year by major financial publications as one of the top five plans in the country.

Information about both of the College Savings Plans of Maryland is available online at www.collegesavingsmd.org where a video explaining the plans can be viewed or downloaded. Information is also available by calling their toll-free number 888-4MD-GRAD (463-4723).

Riversdale Exhibit Highlights Servants
It is nearly dinnertime at Riversdale. There is a flurry of activity as the mistress of the house chooses her clothing in anticipation of the arrival of her guests. Servants are busy cooking and preparing the meal and readying the home for the festivities.

Riversdale House Museum presents a new exhibit, "Out of the Shadows: Servants in the Spotlight," focusing on the lives of Riversdale's servants, both enslaved and free, who served Rosalie Stier Calvert and her husband George. Throughout the house vignettes literally spotlighting the activities and duties of the servants will be juxtaposed against those of the Calverts and their guests.

The exhibit may be viewed during the museum's regular open hours on Fridays and Sundays, noon to 3:30 p.m. through March 16. Special tours for groups of 10 or more may be arranged by appointment. There is a charge. The Riversdale House Museum, a National Historic Landmark, is located at 4811 Riverdale Road in Riverdale Park.

Your Greenbelt Specialists

Having participated with a social justice and solidarity delegation to Venezuela in 2006 I wanted to return again to assist or make a contribution to Venezuela's Bolivarian Revolution and improve my Spanish, too. So I contacted some friends there and they set up for me a part-time volunteer position in Merida at one of their community/cultural centers teaching art classes to poor children over the summer.

The class was one large group of about 22 children ranging in age from 6 to 15 years. Venezuela's schools are closed during the summer months of July and August and the community centers offer many classes and activities for children and teens as do ours here. While I was teaching art (painting and drawing) there were music classes, martial arts, gymnastics and other art classes being taught by Venezuelan staffers.

At first it seemed several other staff members were not too receptive to me but after a few weeks they embraced me and made me feel welcomed as just one of the bunch, particularly when they realized that I was a "Chavista" and wanted to do what I do here (teach art) and to help make a contribution no matter how small to their cause.

I was invited to attend a few PSUV (United Socialist Party of Venezuela) meetings in Merida with my host family. Like a church service a few guests were introduced and applauded. I was also introduced as the gringo art teacher from the U.S. I had worn my red and green Che Guevara T-shirt so I think I received extra applause.

I wanted them to know that not all U.S. citizens believe what

by Robert Snyder

the Bush/Rice/Cheney administration and FOX TV and CNN say about Venezuela and Chavez. President Chavez has implemented many new programs to improve the lives of Venezuela's poor and working class through using their oil sales proceeds to pay for health care and new clinics, schools and free college education programs and job training for the poor.

Bartering

I watched the TV news one evening in late July with my Chavista host family. The Argentinian president and his delegation were in Caracas at a signing event with Chavez. Argentina was to give Venezuela 2,000 head of dairy cattle in exchange for Venezuelan crude oil. There is a shortage of milk and cheese in Venezuela and Argentina needs additional energy assistance. This is solely bartering and there have been many such contracts between Venezuela and other Latin American countries recently.

Venezuela, Bolivia, Ecuador, Cuba, Brazil, Argentina and other socialist and leftist governments of Latin America aren't "playing by the rules" anymore. They are dismissing US neo-liberal economic policies of the 1980s and 90s of borrowing from the

World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, getting in debt and then finding out that the poor were getting poorer.

Latin America is improving economic integration and solidarity and becoming less dependent on Europe and the U.S. while the lives of the poor and marginalized improve.

I witnessed this when I visited other small towns and cities in Venezuela. Many new public works projects are being built. Merida, Maracaibo and Barquisimeto are building new mass transit systems. Caracas is expanding its subway system with new metro stations. City parks are being renovated and new housing and sports and cultural centers are under construction.

In late June we were able to attend one of the Copa America soccer games hosted by Venezuela. Merida was one of eight cities involved. We attended the Peru-Uruguay game. Peru won 3 to 0. It was next to impossible to get tickets for host country Venezuela games.

As the end of my eight weeks in Merida was approaching I had noticed my second grade level Spanish begin to improve as I had become used to speaking in Spanish with my host families and friends and with merchants in their shops. It was also my first experience teaching children in Spanish. I was impressed with how receptive the students were to my less-than-smooth command of the language.

Colombians

Another issue I learned about while serving in Merida was that there are many (some say about 1/4 of the population) Colombians living and working in this western part of Venezuela. Over the past 20 years many have fled the civil conflicts in that neighboring country where the population was forced off the land – displaced internally by the paramilitary and Columbian army's actions and the wealthy white monoculture growers of cotton and the African palm. Most of these people are indigenous Indians or Afro-Colombians. Over the past seven years the Chavez government had welcomed them to Venezuela saying that they would find refuge and assistance in Venezuela.

Lately there has been some friction between these Colombian immigrants and the local Venezuelan population. Some Venezuelans feel that they can not get jobs when the Colombians have taken many of them. Also there is some concern that Colombians are draining away services (free health care and education) which they can't get in Colombia. There are some similarities here with policies toward immigrants from Mexico and Central America that flee to the U.S.

Chavez and his supporters in their parliament have passed legislation addressing this immigration problem by giving these Colombian nationals living in Venezuela until this January to apply for and become citizens of Venezuela. They would then be expected to pay taxes, vote and participate in Venezuelan civil society. If they do not they are to be sent back to Colombia. The word on the street in Merida was that most were complying with this. In fact the host family I stayed with most of the eight weeks were Colombians who had moved to Venezuela to escape poverty in Columbia. They also wanted to have their children benefit from the much superior Venezuelan public schools.

Another highlight was being in the beautiful mountain city of Timotes (pop. 24,000) the weekend of July 22 through 24 while Simon Bolivar's birthday was being celebrated all over South America in city parks and town squares with fireworks, rifle salutes, poetry readings, songs and dancing.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

from our family to yours!
